Delmonico Restaurant, MAIN STREET, OPPOSITE COM-MERCIAL, Los Angeles, California. OPEN at ALL HOURS. THE HONEST MAN WHO WORKS.

A DITTY FOR THE TIMES.

There is one among the many, Can you tell me where he stays? He's an odd, old-fashioned party. Called the honest man, who pays. Yes, the honest man who pays

Every dollar he may owe; Keeping up the good old ways That so many scarcely know. If he gives his word of promise 'Tis a bond as good as gold; If he hold a post of honor Not a trust is ever sold

By the honest man who pays Every debt he may incur; Yielding each a just award And no grudging or demur. And I'm told this rare old party Lives within his income, won By the fairest, squarest dealing We see beneath this sun.

And the honest man who pays Always holds it good and right
For the rich to help the needy
When the times are tough and tight.

Uncle Billy's Objections to Civil Rights. "interviewed" Uncle Billy, a good old colored friend of mine, the other day, on the question of civil rights. "Don't want nuffin' mo'," said Uncle Billy. "Got too much now for dis "How is that, Uncle Billy? Is it not a good thing to be equal before the

"Now, Marse Boss," grunted Billy, plaintively, "dar's jist whar de misery comes in. We're ekal befo' de law, an' dar yer hit our weak pint. Befo' de waw, ef niggah stole chicken an' pig, yer jerked 'im up, guv him thirty-nine lashes, an' let'im go. But ist let a cullud pusson try it now! Yer hauls' fore court and sen's him to de penitentiary, jist like he was one of yer poor white trash. Dat's what 'tis to be ekal 'fo' de law!" I suggested to Uncle Billy that this might be obviated by being a little more honest.

"Marse Boss," interrupted Billy, 'we can't run agin Natur'. It's natral fur niggah to steal pig an' chicken, fryin' size. Yer knows it is, an' 'taint no use tryin' to stop us. Now we uns are willin' to let you uns alone and you all jist let us alone on this pint. We're powerful weak on dis pint, Mars Boss. Just here a perverse and disloyal spirit tempted us to hint to Uncle Billy that colored people were indebted to their Republican friends for this change of their status.

"Well, den, Marse Boss, all Ise got to say is, de law's got to be changed. Mus' hab a law for de white man and a law fo' de black man." Strange as it may seem, some of our best citizens echo Uncle Billy's sentiment. They are inclined to view the negro's minor transgressions in a lenient light, and I know that some of our Democratic Judges impose lighter penalties upon colored men for small offences than they would do in cases where the guilty parties were white. Before Uncle Billy left I asked him how he would like to sit down at the Perry, Woodworth & Co.'s the table with white folks in the "Great Goddlemighty!" exclaimed the good old man. "I allow youse tryin' to make fun of dise chile. Why, you knows yourself dat no culled pussen ebber lets a white man see eat ef dey kin help it!" This is strictly true. The ordinary Southern negro will not eat in the presence of a white spectator.

"Well, Uncle Billy," I said, "it is very evident that you don't want any civil rights." "Not anyting mo,' I tank you." re-plied Billy. "Nearly done ruined now. Hev to pay my own doctor's bills; lost all my money in de Freedmen's Bank; nebber got no forty acres an' de mule dey promised me; an' can't help myself to a little chicken, fryin'

size, widout gwine to de penetentiary.

I'se got 'nuff cibbil rights.'' The above is no production of the fancy. It is a true incident, honestly told, and it is impossible to talk to the country negro without hearing just such things as I have related.—Wallace Putman Reed, in the Independent.

Moore's Restaurant, on Commercial street, is the proper place to go for a good meal, with a good cup of coffee or tea to drink with it.—
There is probably no restaurant on the Pacific coast where so many of the substantials and so many of the luxuries may be had for 25 cts. Don't forget the place—Moore's Restaurant, Commercial street. Private eating rooms have been nearly fitted up for the accommodation of ladies.

The End of a Struggle. The election of SYDNEY DILLON, President of the Union Pacific Railroad, JAY GOULD, OLIVER AMES and D. D. COLTON officers of the Pacific Mail Steamship Company, is the signal that the old company have hauled down their flag and surrendered to the railroad companies. There is but one cause of regret connected with the event, and that is the probable advance in freight. The Pacific Mail are not entitled to the sympathy of the people. They have labored more for subsidy than for patronage. With one donation from the National Treasury, they bribed Congress to grant them another and still larger donation. Their legitimate trade they considered as nothing, and spent the people's money in lobbying for more of the people's money. If the railroad companies are wise, we have no need to mourn the death of the Pacific Mail.

The Value of Property.

That was a strong argument made by Colonel PEEL on Wednesday evening when he told the real estate owners of Los Angeles that if they built the Independence Railroad they would double the value of their property, and by their refusal to build the road they would depreciate it to one-half its present valuation. It may be set down as a fact for the guidance of real contact dealers that unless we do something to enhance the value of our land it certainly will not size sauch above the present figures, and it may decline until the purchasers of this year will find themselves without a margin for profit. This something that will so it will send it up to the figure named by Colonel PEEL, is to build the railroad. The effect of the road will be over the valley. In fact the results will be general and satisfactory. The wealthy real estate men of this city who have subscribed to the stock of the road will find that they have made a paying investment, entirely outside of their interest in the road.

Unity of Action.

In the course of his remarks at the railroad meeting on Wednesday evening, Colonel J. G. HOWARD touched a point which is worthy the consideration of every citizen of Los Angeles. He said that a want of unity-of concert of action-was the great drawback to the prosperity of our city. The Colonel expressed a truth-a lamentable truth. A jealousy, as unwarranted as it is unwise and injurious, is apparent in the actions of many of our and a railroad from thence to Los Aned as it is unwise and injurious, is apleading citizens. It is an unworthy geles. This will reduce freight and fares and enable the farmers to ship feeling, which, while it circumscribes the influence of those who indulge in it, adversely affects, to a great extent, the growth and prosperity of our beautiful city. We do not know, nor is it our purpose to inquire, who is to blame for this. The feeling has, perhaps, grown up like rank and noxious weeds from seed which no one planted, from soil which no one watered. It is enough for us to know that it exists; and to know that it exists is all that is needed to inspire the efforts of all good citizens toward its removal. A house divided against itself stands on a sandy foundation and no city is benefited by internal dissensions. In nothing is the truth of the maxim, "United we stand, divided we fall," so strongly verified as in the prosperity or decline of a city that has attained no greater dimensions than Los Angeles. If we would see what may be done by a community that understands the advantages of united action let us look at the city of Sacramento. and more easy of access. She has been sorely tried. The Country Safe.

Congress has adjourned and to-day the Senate will convene in extra ses-The people have some slight reason for rejoicing over the first event. With the adjournment went out a large number of Congressmen who will never more occupy seats in the body of the House. They were expensive ornaments, and what with their railroad subsidy proclivities, their Credit Mobelier interests and their back pay inclinations, they have cost the country immense sums of money-much more than their services were worth. They have left the Capital for the country's good. The complexion of the next House will, we think, be more comely than of the one just adjourned. It will be Democratic, though we do not wish to be understood as assuming that this fact is a guarantee of improvement. Aside from politics there is a higher standard in the character of the men. When many of the retiring members were elected, the people were using an inferior article of Congressional material. They had found better timber when the new members were chosen. We have reason to hope that with the assembling of the next Congress will be inaugurated measures tending to relieve the people of the heavy burden of taxation under which they have struggled so long and, considering the galling nature of the load, so uncomplainingly. The extra session of the Senate will do nothing of serious import and therefore we may regard the country as safe, for a time at least.

The practical operation of a s the best test of its utility.

The Ventura, on her last trip, ran aground in the mud of San Diego Bay, in the morning, and did not get off until night. She then ran up to the wharf, discharged and took in freight, and left the next morning about 6 o'clock.

In the meantime, the Los Angalas Tuesday, were carried into the bay and camped on the Kalorama until early Wednesday morning in a most uncomfortable condition, and generally down on Los Angeles. The Ventura arrived at San Pedro acout 6 o'clock, when the little boat from Wilfar prevent a decline in real estate that | mington came out to within pistol shot of the Ventura, turned around and towed back a schooner, leaving the San Diego passengers, quite a number, to wait for the 1 o'clock train, although instantaneous in Los Angeles and all they would have been in time for the 9 o'clock train, had the railroad steamer taken them, as she was bound

Now it is quite plain that the agent of the Steamship Company should have telegraphed the railroad agent when the Ventura would leave, and it was equally the duty of the railroad agent to ascertain that fact, and, at all events, there can be no doubt, that it was the duty of the Wilmington steamer to have taken the San Diego passengers up so as to meet the train. It has been observed for some time that the railroad is taking very little pains to accommodate the public. It has a monopoly of the landing at Wilmington, and charges three prices for freight and passage to the anchorage. Without some efficient opposition the reilrest will experience the results of the reilrest will experience tion the railroad will practically close the so-called port at Wilmington, as soon as it can compete its connection with San Francisco, and force freight that way, as much as is in its power.

their produce to San Francisco at living prices. It will also produce steamer opposition and thus reduce ocean alongside of the wharf at Truxton and discharge and take in freight, so as not only to reduce freights in price, but put freight in Los Angeles a day soon-er than by the Wilmington route. The Truxton improvement is of quite as much importance to the people of Los Angeles as the Texas and Pacific Railroad. It is the duty of our citizens, especially of our farmers and merchants, to take hold of the Truxton enterprise, finish our complement of stock by a rapid subscription, so that the work itself may be rapidly con-cluded. Without this opposition in transportation, the farmes of Los Angeles will not be able to ship barley and corn to San Francisco in years of

It has been demonstrated by the experiment at Santa Barbara that a wharf to deep water will resist the ocean. If steamers and sail vessels can land freight and passengers at such a wharf, which is not doubted, it will be a superior port to that of San Diego,

A Branch Railroad.

It is stated that a branch railroad is prosperous city. Had her people been torn by dissensions and divided by jealousies and bickerings, she would have ceased to exist, or existed only as a ragged, muddy village, whose Sleepy Hollow monotony would only be disturbed by the periodical floods of the Sacramento and American pivore.

It now looks from here that buyers would not take hold of wool in your section except at low figures, say from 11 to 13 cents per pound. As gold has advanced so much and with the present outlook for business the coming season, it will not be safe to pay much, if any, above these figures, and for burry wool something less. The room in Temple Block formerly occupied by the Postoffice, has been leased by Joe Williams. The front will be partitioned off for offices, and the rear, comprising two-thirds of the space, fitted up for a gentlemans' sit-ting room to be used in connection with the Palace. Between the offices there will be an entrance way leading to the sitting room and thence to the saloon. The wall in the rear will be taken out and arches substituted. The individual life had left, but the universal still lived on and grew stronger and became more elevated day by day. The family and friends were grief-stricken at their great loss and the spirits were unable to comfort them as they would wish to; but they were gaining in strength, and the day was not far distant when they would be able to make themselves manifest and comfort the afflicted as Christ did in days of yore. He spoke of the prevalent ignorance of the laws of health and life and urged the great necessity of reform in that direction. After the services it was announced that the funeral procession would leave the residence of Mr. Lewis at 10 o'clock.

That Paper. We have been pelted so unceasingly with sharp interrogations concerning that long-promised Illustrated Press that we ceased some time since to seek the flimsy shelter of explanation and apology, but submitted to the pelting in tranquil silence. As our chief ap proaches, however, we feel like paving his way with a few more words of explanation. Business complications at home compelling him to abandon the lecture field just when the harvest was richest, he has gathered up the engrav-ings and other fragments of that paper and will bring them home to the Press office for a proper arrangement and distribution. And it will come in very good time after the severity of the Winter past, to direct the frost-bitten victims where to flee from the wrath of the Winter to come. Once we have the engravings and other material safely in our office, some sort of a result is inevitable. — Santa Barbara

CITY AND COUNTY OFFICIAL PAPER.

...... MARCH 6, 1875.

THE OTHER CHARLIE. BY BELLA FRENCH.

"Charlie, why don't you go and play with the boys, and not be forever stuck at my feet? Such was Mrs. Grey's impatient question one day, when her little son came and seated himself in the parior, when his mother was conversing with a visitor.

"I would rather be with you than the boys," he answered, timidly. "Oh, I never saw such a boy!" "Is it wrong to wish to be near you, mamma?" said the child, his nether lip trembling as he spoke. "Wrong? Of course not; but you are old enough to have some manliness about you. See, yonder are Will and John Growde on the ice. Run along and keep them company; I want to talk to Mrs. Brown."

He picked up his little cap and went off without another word. Mrs. Grey turned to her visitor. "Isn't he a queer child?" she asked.

The other raised her sad eyes and fixed them with such a painful expression on the mother's face that for a moment Mrs. Grey felt almost offended. She was a sorrowful-looking woman, this Mrs. Brown.

"I had a son once; but he is gone now," she said at last, and there were tears in her eyes.

Mrs. Grey gazed at her wonderfully. She had not known this before. "It is a bitter thing to tear open par-tially healed wounds," Mrs. Brown continued, "but let me tell you my

"Several years ago I was about to give a party; a grand affair it was to be, and my head was almost turned while making preparations. Master Charlie (his name was Charlie, too) was about sixteen years old. He had never been to school; I had educated him myself. At home, he was all his mother's heart could desire; but he was shy, and when I forced him into company he appeared so awkward that I felt ashamed of him. This was one reason of my deciding to give a party. If he was obliged to act the part of host he would overcome his bashfulness, I thought. But Charlie never approved of it. "I shall be glad when this party is over," he said, one day; "for since you have got it into your head, I have lost my mother."

"Poor little baby!" I responded slightly provoked at his lack of interest; "I wonder how many more years I shall have you tied to my apron-

I spoke sneeringly, and instantly a proud flush overspread his face. "I will be tied there no longer," he returned; "I will seek my company in I was frightened at the result of my words. Still I made no response. My son, putting on his hat and coat, went out. It was the first time in his life he had ever left me without informing me where he was going.

In time the party came off. It was a gay affair, and none were gayer than Charlie. He was a sort of extremist, and took no medium stand. After nings were spent abroad. Fast young men became his constant companions and I was left alone to mourn the change I had wrought. At first, he made it a rule to be in at night at ten o'clock; but after that he began to stay out later; and daybreak sometimes found him from home. I tried to expostulate, tried to win him back tohis old habits; but my efforts were unavailing. He had got a taste of new life, and it held him by a charm. Well do I remember the first night he came home in a state of intoxication. It was his seventeenth birthday-just one year from the time I had given the party. I had seen him under the influence of wine once or twice before: but on this night he had drank so deeply that some of his companions had to help him home. The hours of that night were dreadful hours of self-reproach- and agony. I was so glad when morning came to dispel the gloom-so sad when reason returned to my erring child. He was very much ashamed. He said again and again he would do better; but his resolves were worthless. Two nights later he was again brought home intoxicated. After that it was a common occurrence. He fell lower and lower, squandered all my ready money, and when I refused to mortgage my property, that he might have more, he left me with an oath. That night a large firm was robbed, and it was discovered that Charlie was one of the perpetrators of the deed. The next morning the town was wild with excitement, and I was almost distracted, for my boy had fled. The news was passed from mouth to mouth; my house was searched, and my son called a villain; but I had no power to prevent either. No one gave me a word of sympathy.

"You have only yourself to blame," said a blunt old woman who called during the day. "The boy was happy at home but you drove him into bad

That night at the hour of twelve, as sat alone, a window was opened softly, and Charlie stepped into the room. With a glad cry I sprang to-ward him, but he rudely pushed me

"Can you hide me anywhere?" he said; "The hounds are after me, Had you given me money yesterday this would not have been.

"Oh, Charlie!" I cried.
"Yes, mother," he said, sternly.
"You have made me a criminal. I want to tell you I have secretly married Kate Hastings. God only knows what will become of her, as the world will not believe we are married. She will be scorned by all." "Kate was a pretty little creature, only sixteen years old, innocent as the violets which grew around her home. My bleeding heart gave a quick, painful throb. "Hark! they are coming. Mother,I am too young, too wicked to die, but I must die. Farewell!"

I saw his purpose now, for his hand clutched a revolver; and springing to my feet, I threw my arms about him to shield him from himself. But he was a blank to me.

When I awoke to consciousness the morning sun was shining, and the house was filled with people. But even justice was satisfied, and I was left alone with the dead.

All day, tearless and motionless, I sat beside the mangled corpse. Some people kinder than the rest, came in to make preparations for the funeral, and passed silently out; but I did not

Kate Hastings came just after dark. She was dressed in deep mourning, and her face was so ghastly that it startled

"You, too, have come to reproach me?" I said. "No, mother. You suffer enough without my reproaches. I have come to watch with the dead.' "I wish to watch alone," she returned. "It is my right, I am his

How calm she was! There was not even a tremor of the voice to tell how "Yes, it is your right, my poor child!" I said. 'It gives me another pang to give him up, even to my daughter; still I do it.

She looked up quickly. "He has told you?"

"Yet you speak kindly to me and do not condemn us?" A sad but beautiful smile for a moment lighted her features. raised one of my hands and kissed it reverently.

"Thank you," she said. "Some-time you will be glad for having shown this kindness to one so much in need of it. Now, mother, leave

I left the apartment, but not to retire. All night I sat on the outside of the door, hoping that Katie would bid me enter, but no such summons came. Daylight returned, and the busy world again moved; still I heard no movement in the chamber of death. At last my anxiety became so great that I opened the door and glanced in. The girl knelt by the corpse, apparently asleep. Softly I stole forward and raised the drooping head. But no sad eyes met my gaze; nothing but the white face, the staring orbs of a corpse. Katie had died by her own hand, as a bottle which she clutched proved. The next day they buried the pairmy erring son and his child-wife-in one grave, and as the clods fell on his coffin, the brightness of my life went out forever.

Mrs. Brown cauld say no more, for her sobs choked her utterance. Her listener was also deeply affected, as her pale face and tearful eyes Leaving the bereaved mother for a moment, Mrs. Grey stole softly to the door and called: "Charlie." The child heard her, and came quickly to her side.

"What is it, mamma?" "It is lonesome without you, darling," she said, drawing him to her. "Then you love me, mamma?" "Love you? Oh, Charlie!" Her arms were about him now, and he was sobbing on his shoulder. "Did anybody tell you about those bad boys?" he asked, wonderingly. "They have got a flask of whiskey, "Thank God! you are saved, my darling!" she cried hysterically. She drew him closer to her, she clung to him, she showered kisses on his wondering face; but never, until he was a man, did she tell him the history of that other Charlie, whose childhood and his had been so much alike; and how, by the knowledge of the other Charlie's unfortunate career, he had been saved by her, perhaps, from a like fate.
